

Pool Room — League Hall

Player-first: the six tables at maximum elbow room, rail drinks

Inside the room at the southwest end, eye level, looking east toward the Main Entry

Overhead render

Service-flow diagram

In brief

- The same six tables as every option, spread for the widest aisles in the study.
- Drinks live on the west rail; deliveries cross active play.

Pool Room — Social Hall (current)

The built layout: six tables, classroom, and wall two-tops

Inside the room at the southwest end, eye level, looking east toward the Main Entry

Overhead render

Service-flow diagram

In brief

- The room as built today — the baseline for every option.
- Wall two-tops flex between drinking, dining, and watching.

Pool Room — Tournament House

A north gallery of bleachers and the stage face the feature row

Inside the room at the southwest end, eye level, looking east toward the Main Entry

Overhead render

Service-flow diagram

In brief

- The bench gives way to a bleacher gallery; the nearest table row becomes the feature row.
- Food drops to handhelds while racks are in play.

Pool Room — Cocktail Lounge

Bar-forward: tables compress north, the entry end becomes lounge

Inside the room at the southwest end, eye level, looking east toward the Main Entry

Overhead render

Service-flow diagram

In brief

- The lounge meets guests at the door; trays barely travel.
- Bar-height two-tops and wall rails fill the south third.

Pool Room — Billiards Bistro

Dining-forward: five-foot rounds fill the south third

Inside the room at the southwest end, eye level, looking east toward the Main Entry

Overhead render

Service-flow diagram

In brief

- Dinner routes down the east lane; the rounds sit south of play.
- Cocktails travel farthest; a mid-room drop station would help.

Pool Room — Split-House Flex

Fixed play north, folding flex zone at the entry end

Inside the room at the southwest end, eye level, looking east toward the Main Entry

Overhead render

Service-flow diagram

In brief

- Service never crosses the play zone.
- The rounds fold and stack — the south third flips between banquet, dining, and overflow.