Service-flow diagram

In brief

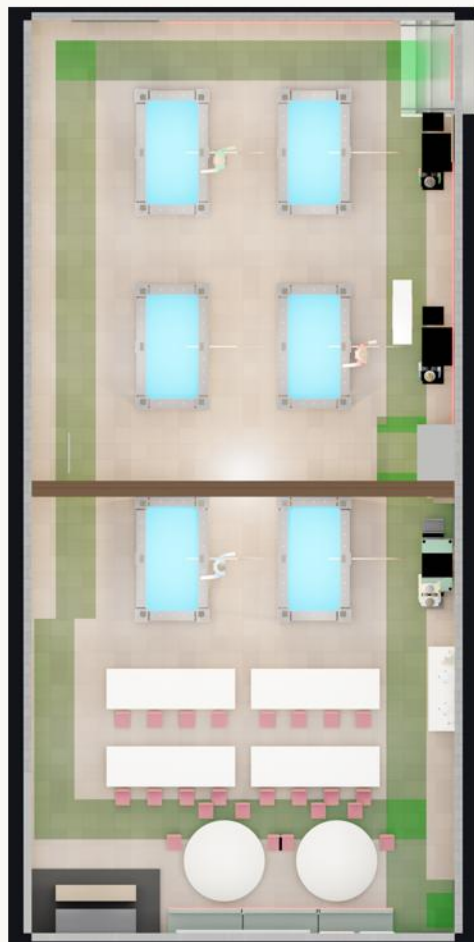

- The same six tables as every option, spread for the widest aisles in the study.
- Drinks live on the west rail; deliveries cross active play.

Pool Room — Social Hall (current)

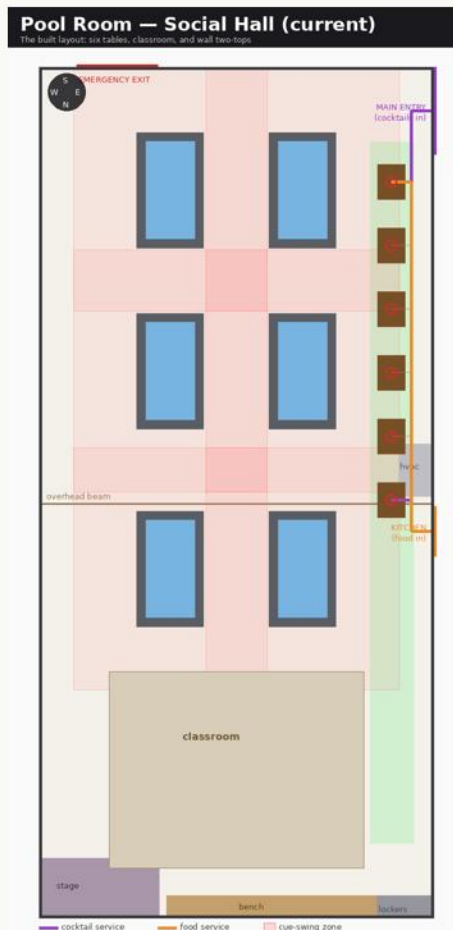

The built layout: six tables, classroom, and wall two-tops

Inside the room at the southwest end, eye level, looking east toward the Main Entry

Service-flow diagram

In brief

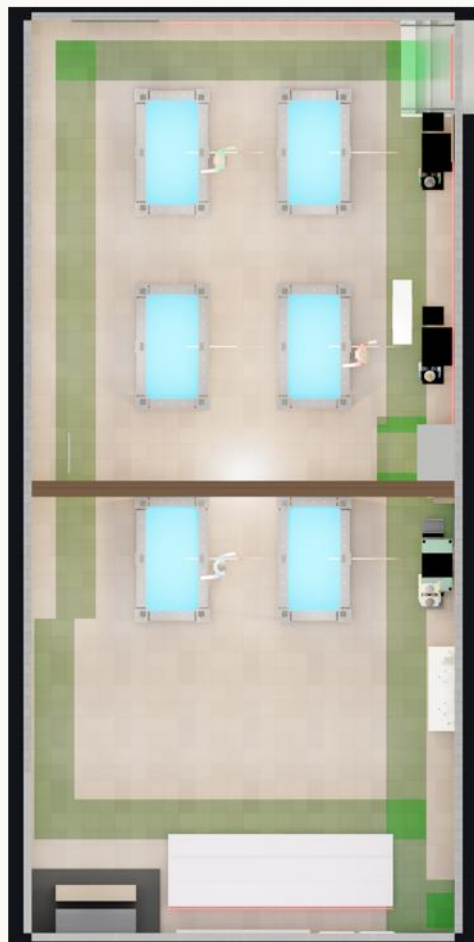

- The room as built today — the baseline for every option.
- Wall two-tops flex between drinking, dining, and watching.

Pool Room — Tournament House

A north gallery of bleachers and the stage face the feature row

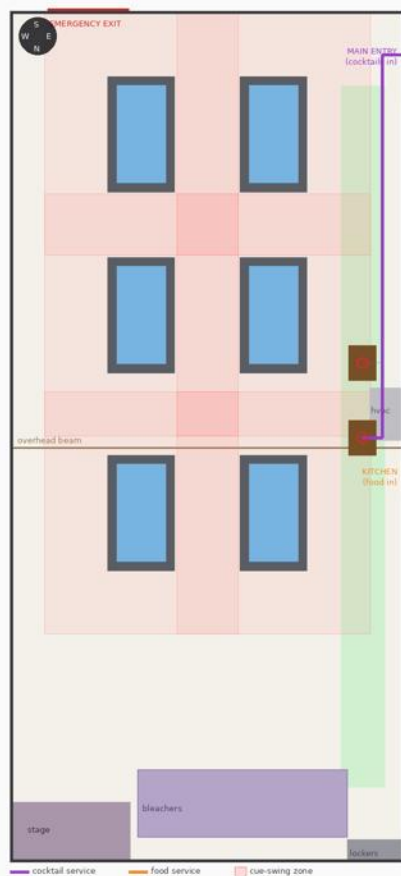

Inside the room at the southwest end, eye level, looking east toward the Main Entry

Pool Room — Tournament House

A north gallery of bleachers and the stage face the feature row

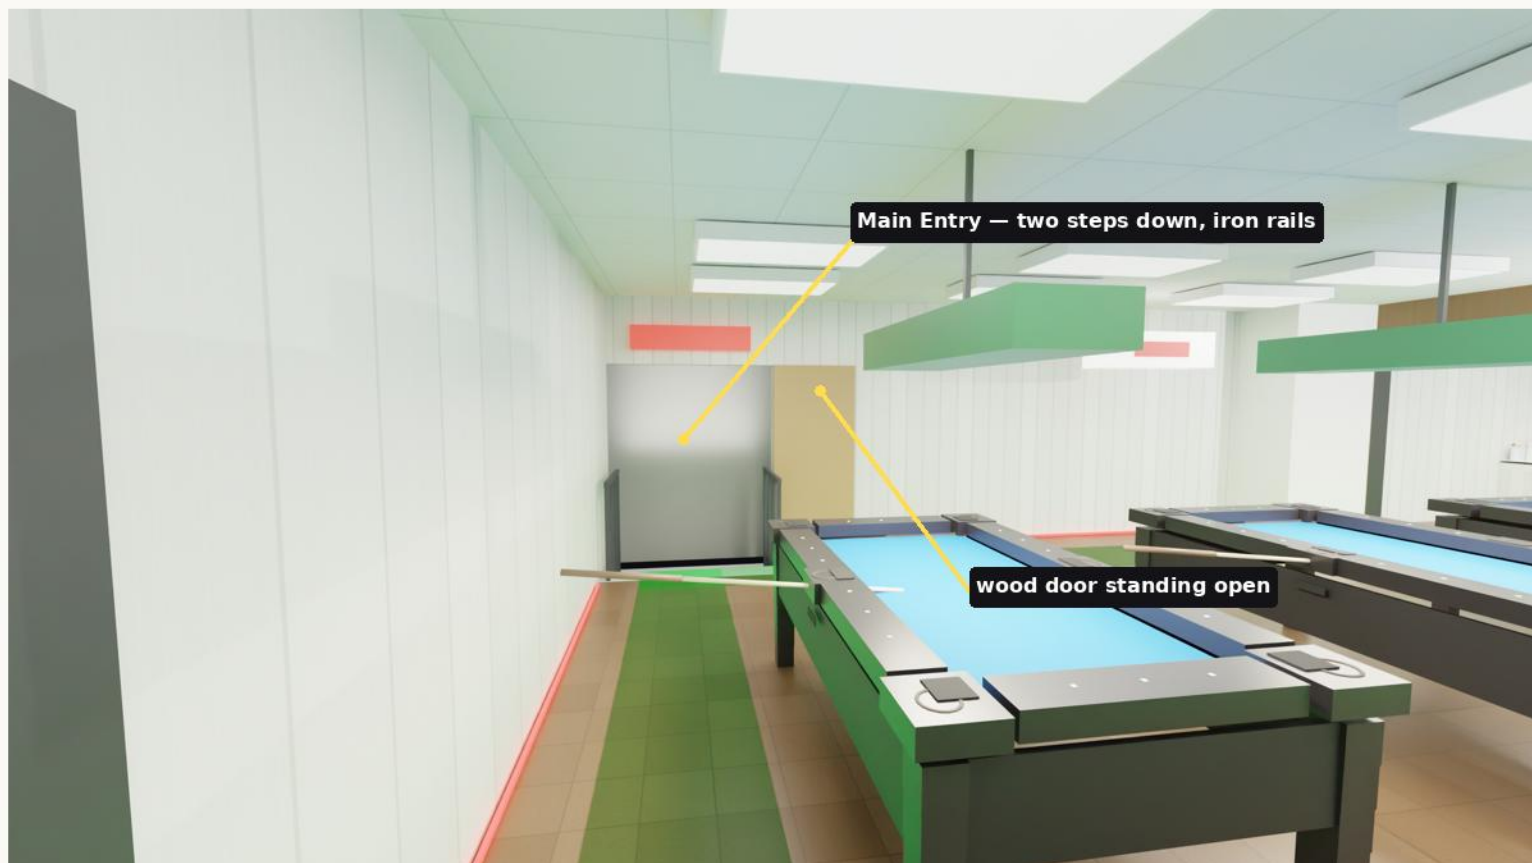

Service-flow diagram

In brief

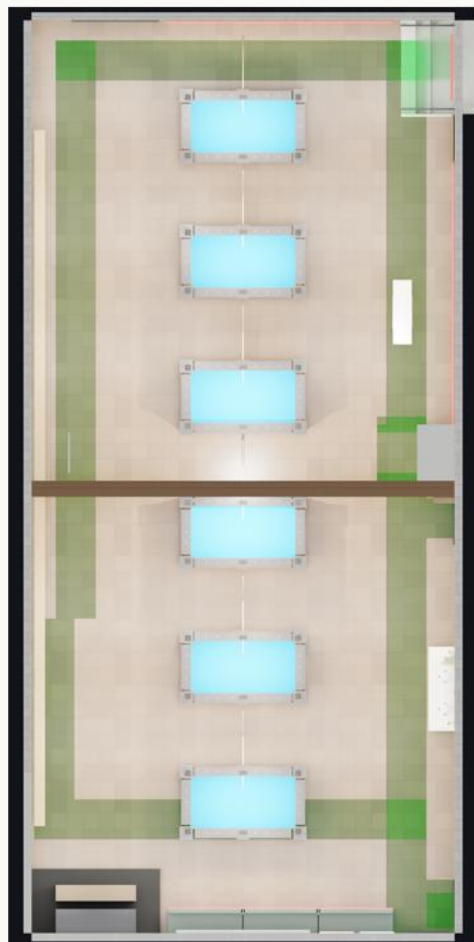

- The bench gives way to a bleacher gallery; the nearest table row becomes the feature row.
- Food drops to handhelds while racks are in play.

Pool Room — Center Line

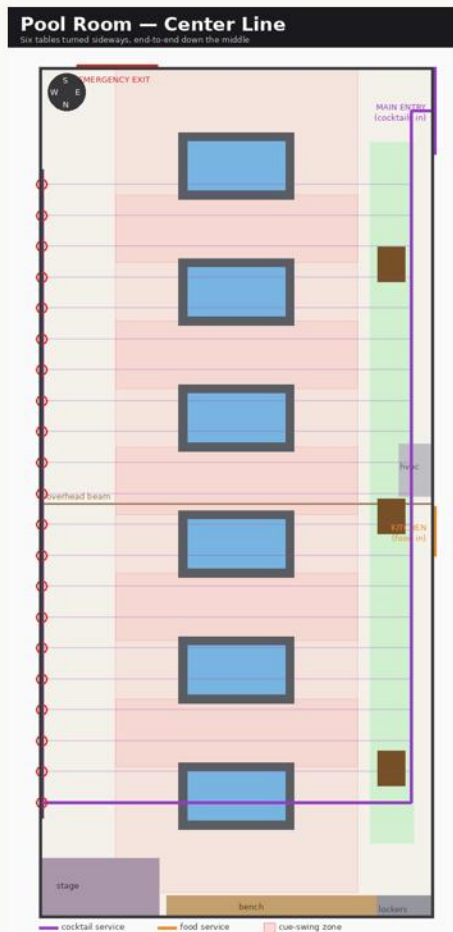

Six tables turned sideways, end-to-end down the middle

Inside the room at the southwest end, eye level, looking east toward the Main Entry

Overhead render

Service-flow diagram

In brief

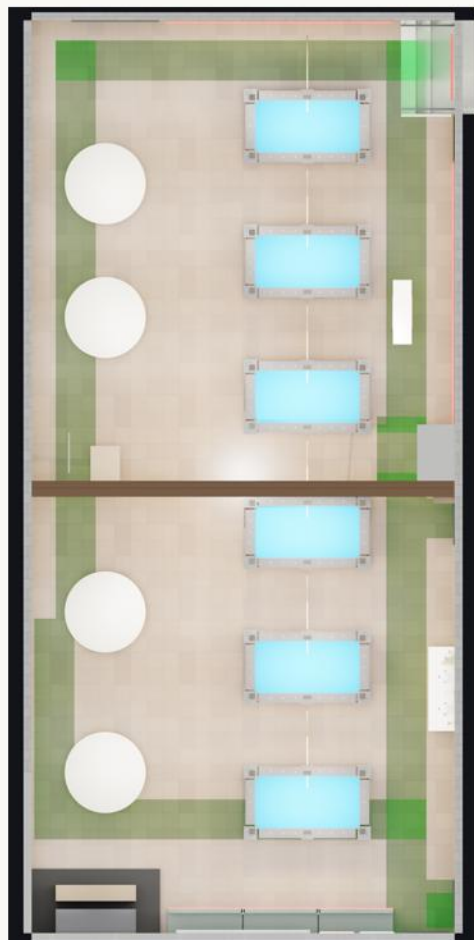

- Every table on display from the full-length side aisles.
- Side-to-side swings between neighbours run tight; the table ends get full room.

Pool Room — East Line + West Lounge

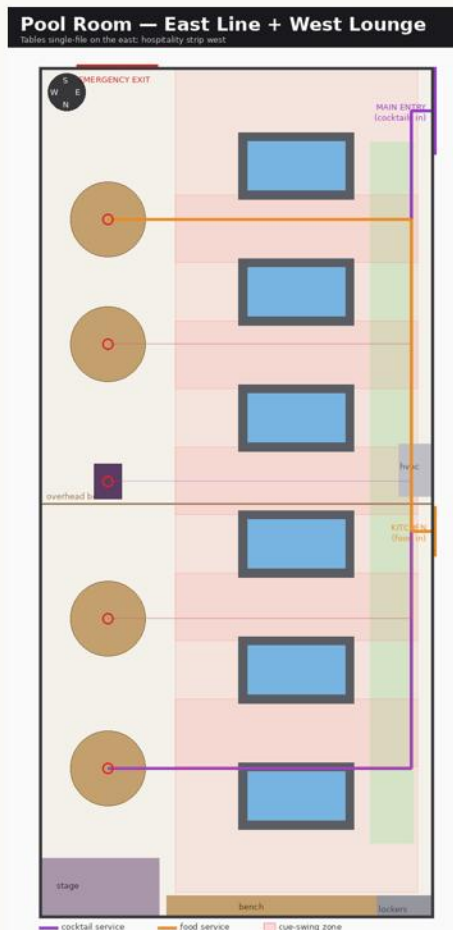

Tables single-file on the east; hospitality strip west

Inside the room at the southwest end, eye level, looking east toward the Main Entry

Overhead render

Service-flow diagram

In brief

- The west side hosts folding rounds and a high-top the full length of the room.
- Every delivery crosses the table line — hospitality sits opposite the doors.
