Service-flow diagram

In brief

- The room as built today — the baseline for every option.
- Wall two-tops flank every table row on both walls; the north end seats a five-round social cluster around a center round.
- The cluster runs deliberately tight, and the two-top by the kitchen door partially fronts it — both accepted.

Pool Room — Tournament House

A north gallery of rounds faces the feature row

Service-flow diagram

In brief

- The bleachers give way to a gallery of five rounds; the nearest table row becomes the feature row.
- Food drops to handhelds while racks are in play.

Pool Room — Center Line

Six tables turned sideways, end-to-end down the middle

Inside the room at the southwest end, eye level, looking east toward the Main Entry

Service-flow diagram

In brief

- Every table on display from the full-length side aisles.
- The service lane runs inboard, between the table ends and the east wall tops — the wall lane pinched.
- Side-to-side swings between neighbours run tight; the table ends get full room.

Pool Room — East Line + West Lounge

Tables single-file on the east; six aligned rounds west

Inside the room at the southwest end, eye level, looking east toward the Main Entry

Service-flow diagram

In brief

- Six rounds in one line down the west side, each on its table's centerline.
- FLAG: the southernmost round narrows the Emergency Exit approach — the walk bends around its chairs.
- Every delivery crosses the table line — hospitality sits opposite the doors.

Pool Room — West Line + Wall Rounds

Tables single-file west; a round beside every table east

Inside the room at the southwest end, eye level, looking east toward the Main Entry

Service-flow diagram

In brief

- Every table gets its own five-foot round at matching height — all six, per the brief.
- FLAG: the southernmost round crowds the Main Entry approach beside the stair rail.
- FLAG: one round sits partially in front of the kitchen door — accepted to keep its table paired.
